

Martin Robertson

Spring Morning

Across a cold bright air the sun slants. The day and the year are young, and it doesn't matter that the world (or matter much) and I are old.