

Martin Robertson

Masque

Cornered in the bewildering night Love summoned Dignity to fight, and Pride, against Despair; but Pride and Dignity had touched so little at Love's hand they did not care to make a stand against so huge an enemy.

Towards that half-seen enemy Love walked alone, and presently found—not indeed Despair but, huge and grim enough, the Black Knight of the Question-Mark, and with him Fear. . . and in the dark against them, sole and shaking, Love.

Then, almost fore-defeated, Love sensed at his shoulder something move. . . so whisper-faint. . . a dream?
No—if intangible, still a warm presence at his side to second him: unjustified, unsummoned, Hope, the loyal fool.